PREFATORY NOTE

The purpose of this List is to exhibit material dealing with International Arbitration, and, further, particularly to show that on the Conferences at the Hague. The question of the Limitation of armaments and that of the Collection of foreign debts having had special prominence at the Hague Conference of 1907, material dealing with these two topics is likewise given under separate heads. In addition there are listed references to discussions on the French occupation of Mexico, the Venezuela case, and the Santo Domingo question.

The later stages of compilation have been done under the direction of William Adams Slade, who has also seen the List through the press.

Limitation of armaments will never be feasible so long as man remains as he is in the existing world; on no single point has any definite conclusion been arrived at when there has been anything really concrete to decide upon; the use of a permanent Court of Arbitration is to be questioned because no clientèle is provided until we have the regular institution of compulsory arbitration by agreement between all nations.

The subject of its deliberation is peace, and its report includes a recommendation that future conferences introduce in their programmes an article on the abolition of war.

- 1907. The second Hague conference. An approximate estimate of its work. Sir Thomas Barclay.
Fortnightly review, n. s., vol. 82 (Oct. 1, 1907): 551-561.
 "The current impression that the Conference of 1907 has not been productive of results commensurate with the gigantic display of energy involved in keeping forty-seven highly-paid delegations several months at the Hague, is quite a mistaken one. . . .
 "Experience at the present Conference has demonstrated that a distinction must be made in the future between two classes of questions, viz, those which are of general, and those which are of special interest; that it is only those of general interest which with utility can be laid before a Conference of all the States of the world.
 "Among the questions of special interest are not only and obviously the restriction of military and naval armaments and budgets, but also obligatory arbitration with which it lies in close contact."

 The work at the Hague is disappointing, but not necessarily discouraging. The majority sentiment though not technically effective really represents the majority of nations. "In some respects, and especially as compared with the high hopes of lovers of their kind, the Hague Conference adjourned as a failure; but nothing is a failure which leaves earnest men only baffled in order to fight better."

Names of fifteen positive achievements of the Hague conference and affirms that the decision "the nation shall not attempt forcibly to collect a debt claimed by its citizens against the Government of another nation unless there shall first be an offer by the creditor country to submit the question of the indebtedness to arbitration" would "compensate for the time and money expended in this conference."

"La Conférence de la Haye . . . finit au milieu d'une ironique indifférence . . . Les délégués sont contents d'en avoir fini avec leurs travaux. Soyez sûrs qu'ils sont bien pénétrés de l'inanité de leur tâche, mais soyez sûrs aussi que dans tous les Parlements, les Ministres des Affaires étrangères vont célébrer la grandeur de l'œuvre accomplie."

1907. The work of the Hague conference.

Spectator, vol. 99 (Oct. 5, 1907): 472.

Self-interest carried too far, notably in the treatment of the British proposal as to submarine mines. The real difficulty at the Conference was the equal voting power of the Powers represented, irrespective of their size. Unanimity is not essential for progress.

The procedure which it initiated, and which, with modifications, will probably long play an important part; the real though unassuming good work which it did; the light which it has thrown on the disposition of certain Governments towards the principles of neutrality in naval war, and the attitude of the British Government in defence of those principles; and the British proposal to abolish contraband of war—all these ensure to the Conference of 1907 that it will not be forgotten either in international law or in international politics."

Discussion by Mr. Vivian, Mr. Fenwick, Mr. Bellairs, Captain Hervey, Mr. Charles Wilson, Mr. Hugh Law, Mr. J. M. Robertson, Mr. A. J. Balfour, and Sir Edward Grey, on the following resolution which was adopted:

"Resolved, That this House is of opinion that the growth of expenditure on armaments is excessive and ought to be reduced, such expenditure lessens national and commercial credit, intensifies the unemployed problem, reduces the resources available for social reform, and presses with exceptional severity on the industrial classes, and it therefore calls upon the Government to take drastic steps to reduce the drain on national income and to this end to press for the inclusion of the question of the reduction of armaments by international agreement in the agenda of the forthcoming Hague Conference."

"Gives first the text of the Drago note of Dec. 29, 1902.

"Il est immédiatement suivi de la réponse qui y fut faite le 17 février 1903 par le Secrétaire d'État des États-Unis, et qui n'était pas aussi nette que pouvait l'espérer le ministre de la République Argentine. Les autres parties du livre de M. D., qui au point de vue du développement du droit international offre un grand intérêt, contiennent des extraits d'un certain nombre d'ouvrages où a été examinée et appréciée en des sens divers la thèse désormais connue sous le nom de thèse Drago. C'est d'abord le message du Président de la République Argentine, Général Roca, à l'ouverture du Congrès le 4 mai 1903; ce sont ensuite un discours de M. Drago dans un banquet du 29 mai 1903 et une étude que le ministre argentin avait publiée en 1892 et où il appliquait déjà sa doctrine dans les rapports entre les États fédéraux; c'est enfin la reproduction de quelques articles consacrés à la question par des publicistes de différents pays: M. F. de Martens (Par la justice vers la paix), M. Alexandre Hamilton (Federalist, no. 81), M. Carlos Calvo (Le droit international théorique et pratique, t. I, p. 351), M. Basdevant (Voir cette Revue, t. XI (1904), p. 362 et suiv.). Le volume se termine par une note des États-Unis du 22 mars 1906 relative à la prochaine Conférence internationale américaine, où il est fait allusion au système de M. Drago, et par le programme de cette Conférence, où il est proposé que la seconde Conférence de la paix, qui doit se réunir à la Haye, soit invitée à étudier l'usage de la force pour le recouvrement des dettes publiques; la Conférence internationale américaine, qui s'est tenue à Rio de Janeiro du 23 juillet au 23 août 1906, a effectivement adopté le 22 août une résolution en ce sens."

(In Great Britain. Parliament. Sessional papers, 1875, vol. 11.)

The committee first presents an historical survey of the following loans: The Honduras loans; The Santo Domingo loan; The Costa Rica loan, 1871, 1872; and The Paraguay loan, 1871, 1872; with comments on the character and the method of placing the loans.

The Appendix contains detailed historical accounts of the various loans by officials of the several countries. "The foreign loans originally contracted by these countries (with the solitary exception of Santo Domingo) were negotiated to aid them in winning their independence. During the sixties and early seventies of the last century, however, when Russia, Turkey, and Egypt were engaged in issuing what a witty Frenchman has styled "les emprunts à jet continu," certain of the smaller Spanish American States also appeared in the European markets as borrowers on what was for them a large scale and at high rates. But the golden dream of those who acquired their securities was not enduring. The crash soon came, and the evidence given at a Parliamentary inquiry held in London in 1875, revealed not only that the issue of these bonds formed a dark page in international finance, but also that the countries in whose names they were contracted were sinned against as well as sinning." Monthly rev., Jan., 06: 63.

(In Italia moderna, vol. 21, Sept. 15, 1906, pp. 121-128.)

"A torto si vuol far passare la nuova dottrina per una derivazione di quella di Monroe. Sorta durante la lotta fra la Spagna e le sue colonie sud-americane, mentre imperavano in Europa i principî di intervento proclamati nel congresso di Vienna, quest' ultima si limitava ad affermare, da un lato, il disinteresse degli Stati Uniti per le vicende della politica europea, dall' altro la incompatibilità di nuove appropriazioni coloniali sul territorio americano. La dottrina di Monroe non ebbe mai, del resto, sanzione legislativa o convenzionale, negli Stati Uniti se ne valsero per intervenire direttamente nei molteplici conflitti occorsi in processo di tempo fra alcuni Stati d' Europa e dell' America meridionale. La teoria di Drago è insostenibile, l' uso di mezzi coercitivi per far valere, in casi estremi, le proprie ragioni di credito essendo ammesso dal diritto pubblico internazionale, come dal diritto privato: censurabile del punto di vista morale, produrrebbe finalmente disastrose conseguenze economiche per gli Stati sud-americani''.
